152 Editorial
On fair and adequate compensation for judges.

153 Letters
On TV in the courtroom and victim compensation.

Steven Balkin 154 Prisoners by day: a proposal to sentence non-violent offenders to a non-residential work facility
By working at a state-operated business, offenders could learn good work habits, acquire a skill, make restitution—and go home each night to their families.

Charles E. Marske and Steven Vago 165 Law and dispute processing in the academic community
As the university becomes more of a bureaucracy than a community, its members are turning to the courts to resolve disputes they once settled informally.

Larry Berkson 176 Judicial selection in the United States: a special report
Here's a comprehensive listing of how each of the 50 states chooses judges for each level of its court system.
