343 Letters

On a hybrid plan for choosing judges.

Sheldon Goldman

344 Carter's judicial appointments: a lasting legacy

Carter appointed more judges than any other President in history. But more important, he contributed to the professionalization of the judiciary and created new expectations for a more open selection process.

G. Alan Tarr

356 Court unification and court performance:
a preliminary assessment

Now that unification is a reality in many jurisdictions, researchers are beginning to ask what results it actually produces. The answer isn't clear.

*John K. Hudzik
and John H. Wakeley*

369 Evaluating court training programs

Training is supposed to help court employees do a better job, but what kind of training is best? A careful evaluation can help planners assess the value of their program.

376 Focus
