A judge in the jury box

387 Query

Do we really understand how caseload pressures may affect criminal justice decisionmaking?

Frank Way

390 A call for limits to judicial immunity:
must judges be kings in their courts?

A doctrine of limited judicial immunity would still protect judges from lawsuits by disgruntled litigants, but not from suits by those who can prove judicial negligence or malice.

George C. Greanias and Duane Windsor

400 Is judicial restraint possible in an administrative society?

As government grows and Congress shows a reluctance to address difficult issues, the courts have been forced to assume a new and dangerous role in leading society across uncharted terrain.

*Joyce Sterling,
E. Keith Stott, Jr.,
and Steven Weller*

414 What judges think of performance evaluation:
a report on the Colorado survey

Colorado judges like the idea of periodic appraisals, but they recommend that a combination of evaluation methods be used so that a variety of views can be presented to the public.
