

MEDIATION QUARTERLY

VOLUME 16
NUMBER 2
WINTER 1998

SPONSORED BY THE ACADEMY OF FAMILY MEDIATORS

Jossey-Bass Publishers

CONTENTS

- EDITOR'S NOTES 109
- PRACTICE
- Disabilities and Mediation Readiness in Court-Referred Cases:
Developing Screening Criteria and Service Networks 113
Patrick G. Coy, Timothy M. Hedeem
The authors consider ways of assessing the capacity of disputants who have a disability that affects their ability to participate meaningfully in a mediation process. They offer a screening protocol to evaluate whether the disability would preclude participation in mediation.
- Diffusion of a Campus Innovation: Integration of a New Student
Dispute Resolution Center into the University Culture 129
Jessica Katz Jameson
This article examines a peer mediation program introduced at Temple University; the author considers the challenges faced when trying to integrate the principles and practices of conflict resolution into the university culture.
- THEORY
- The Language of Cooperation: Negotiation Frames 147
Katherine Hale
The author explores frames—the ways people organize their perceptions of themselves and others—and proposes that the comic or hopeful frame provides a relevant and effective way to work with conflict situations.
- RESEARCH
- Changing the Paradigm: The Effect of Recent Family Law Legislation
in England, Australia, and the United States 163
Hugh McIsaac
The fabric of laws relating to family law matters has been rewoven. This article documents both the extent and the significance of legislative changes in Washington state, Oregon, and England and Australia.

Satisfaction with Custody Mediation: Results from the York County
Custody Mediation Program 185

Tricia S. Jones, Andrea Bodtker

The authors report the findings of a study of client satisfaction in a court-based custody mediation program. The study examined both long-term and short-term indices of satisfaction, as well as the extent of mediator satisfaction and its correlation with client satisfaction.

Developmental Considerations: Encouraging Perspective Taking in Student Mediators 201

Pamela S. Lane-Garon

This study of student mediators in an elementary school develops the view that those trained in mediation have enhanced social cognition and an increased capacity for perspective taking—acknowledging and attending to the views and concerns of others.