

MEDIATION QUARTERLY

VOLUME 17

NUMBER 4

SUMMER 2000

SPECIAL ISSUE

Community Mediation: Past and Future

SPONSORED BY THE ACADEMY OF FAMILY MEDIATORS

Jossey-Bass Publishers

CONTENTS

SPECIAL ISSUE: COMMUNITY MEDIATION: PAST AND FUTURE
Scott Bradley, Melinda Smith, Guest Editors

EDITOR'S NOTES 313

Community Mediation: Reflections on a Quarter Century of Practice 315

Scott Bradley, Melinda Smith

Guest editors for this special issue, the authors describe the emergence and development of community mediation in the United States. They also identify the issues and challenges facing community mediation in the coming years.

Reflections on Past Successes and Future Challenges: Three Perspectives 321

Liz O'Brien, Betty McManus, Cheryl Cutrona, Harry M. Boertzel

Liz O'Brien and Betty McManus of the San Diego Mediation Center describe how commercial mediation services are used to support the activities of a traditional community mediation center. Cheryl Cutrona of the Good Shepherd Mediation Program in Philadelphia traces the development of a community mediation center that has expanded the scope of its activities over its sixteen-year history while retaining the founding values of peace, social justice, and reconciliation. Harry M. Boertzel of the Oakland Mediation Center, Bloomfield Hills, Michigan, identifies the fundamental principles of operation that guide the activities of this community mediation center.

Community Mediation Centers: Renewing the Civic Mission for the Twenty-First Century 331

Raymond Shonholtz

This article traces the political foundation of the community movement and argues that community mediation centers continue to have a unique opportunity to affect matters of social justice by influencing social change through their programs.

Understanding Public Disputes Resolution in Community Mediation Andrew M. Sachs	341
Increasingly, community mediation centers are providing a consensus-building process for the management of public disputes. The author provides examples to support the involvement of community mediation centers in these activities.
Community Mediation and the Court System: The Ties That Bind Timothy Hedeem, Patrick G. Coy	351
There has been a long and constructive relationship between community mediation centers and the court system. That connection has not, however, been without problems. The authors explore both the benefits and challenges of the working relationship between the centers and the courts.
Diversity in Community Mediation: A Conversation with Janice Tudy-Jackson and Roberto Chené Melinda Smith	369
The author provided the question for the two key participants in the evolution of community mediation. The transcript of this conversation focuses on the ability of community mediation centers to sustain the ideals and values on which they were founded.
ARTICLES
Attorneys' Negotiation Strategies in Mediation: Business as Usual? Elizabeth Ellen Gordon	377
Increasingly attorneys are conducting negotiations to resolve legal disputes through the mediation process. This article presents the results of a study that considered whether mediation has the potential to affect the ways in which attorneys conduct their negotiations.
Current Issues Facing the Practice of Environmental Mediation Susan L. Senecah	391
The potential conflict among party self-determination, informed decision making, and neutrality, among other ethical and practice dilemmas confronting mediators dealing with environmental disputes, is explored in this article.
VOLUME 17 INDEX	409