

JOURNAL

MARCH 2000 VOL 47 NO 1

Scottish Special Issue

Analysing 'Effective Practice'

Lessons From Youth Justice

Domestic Violence Projects

Personal Construct Theory

Human Rights Act

National Standards

Scottish Perspectives on Name Change

Plus

The Case Against 'Punishment and Rehabilitation'

The Case for a 'Community
Justice Service'

PROBATION Journal

VOLUME 47 No 1 MARCH 2000

CARDEX	✓
VOCES
DATOS
OK
2000
2000

- Editorial 3 Scottish Context For Criminal Justice Social Work
- Measuring Effectiveness: Linking Policy, Research And Practice 4 Fergus McNeill considers questions emerging from, but rarely addressed by, the contemporary discourse on 'what works'
- Learning From The Scottish Juvenile Justice System 12 David Smith assesses the strengths and weaknesses of Scottish youth justice in the context of the more punitive stance towards young offenders south of the border
- Domestic Violence Programmes: A Framework For Change 18 Rebecca Dobash, Kate Cavanagh, Russell Dobash and Ruth Lewis explore the process of change in men attending successful domestic violence programmes
- The Use Of Personal Construct Theory In Work With Men Who Abuse Women Partners 30 Rory Macrae and Moira Andrew explain the fundamentals of a method which steers a middle road between sometimes dichotomised approaches to domestic violence interventions
- Re-naming Probation 39 Mike Nellis puts the case for a 'Community Justice Service', and argues that it is time to give up the title 'Probation Service'
- Reflections: Naming Criminal Justice Social Work: A Scottish Response To Mike Nellis 45 Chris Clark criticises both Nellis' and the government's preferred options and summarises the current position in Scotland
- Reflections: The Value Of A Community-Based Identity For Criminal Justice Services 48 Mairi Brackenridge argues that criminal justice social work services must be strongly related to the communities in which they are offered
- Reflections: "Punish And Rehabilitate" – Do They Mean Us? 51 Chris Hignett attacks the proposal to re-name the Probation Service, and highlights what the Service stands to lose from such a change in identity

PROBATION Journal

VOLUME 47 No 1 MARCH 2000

- Practice Note: Responding To The Human Rights Act 53 Susan Wallace assesses the implications for social work and probation services of the soon-to-be-implemented European Convention on Human Rights
- Practice Note: The Future Of Scottish National Standards 56 John Waterhouse considers the contribution of National Standards to the social work task
- Research & Reports 59 Electronic Monitoring, Home Detention Curfew, Homelessness and Crime, Prison Overcrowding, Drugs and Alcohol in Feltham, Abuse of Adolescents, Restorative Justice, Changing Attitudes to Offending, Probation 2000 Conference, Understanding Offending
- Reviews 70 Mentally Disordered Offenders, Criminal Conversations, Young Offenders, Social Exclusion, Working with Sex Offenders, Sociology of Imprisonment, Drug Use and Community Safety, Social Work Management, Risk Assessment
- In Court 80 Disputing PSR information, Indirect Contact, Detention and Training Orders, Case Conferences, Violence to Hospital Staff, PSR Requirement, Denial and Parole, HDC Assessment, USI as Indecent Assault, Return to Prison, Supplying Paracetamol, Firearm for Self Harm, Racial Aggravation
- Resources 85 Employment Website, Anxiety Self Help Guide, Enforcement Guide, HIV in Prisons, Resettlement Leaflets, Alcohol Initiatives
- Letters 86 Mean-Spirited Parole Board, Female Partners of Sex Offenders Research, Training Probation Officers
-