52 Root Causes

Turn-of-the-century Chicago had a radical idea: Don't just punish crime, but reform criminals and the society that produced them.

BY ADAM COHEN

PRACTICE

56 The Quest to Be Called a Tribe

The lure of casinos has raised the stakes for federal recognition.

BY MICHAEL NELSON

STORIES

61 Marshall's Law

Burke Marshall deserves credit for ensuring the passage of Kennedy's Civil Rights Act of 1964, but the reticent antitrust lawyer never took it.

BY DIANE MCWHORTER

65 Passing Fancy

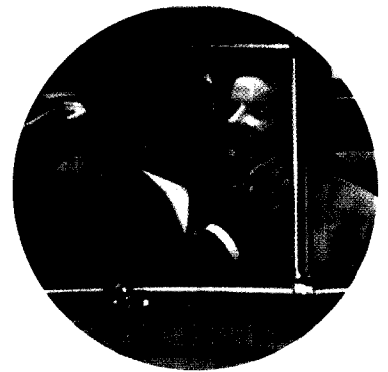

In the Jim Crow South, courts understood that rigidly enforcing the rules against mixed marriage would have been a disaster—for whites.

BY DANIEL J. SHARFSTEIN

69 Cleaning House

Sierra Leone's war crimes tribunal defied history by going after the victors, not just the losers, in the country's civil war.
